

International Society for Equitation Science

Council position

ISES VETERINARY LIASON OFFICER

The International Society for Equitation Science calls for nominations for the position of Veterinary Liaison Officer (VLO) within the ISES Council. In collaboration with a dedicated team of internationally recognised academics, the VLO occupies an important role in achieving the Society's mission:

To promote and encourage the application of objective research and advanced practice which will ultimately improve the welfare of equids in their associations with humans.

This person will be expected to work within the ISES constitution with specific responsibility to:

- Develop working links with the international equine veterinary community to enable the Society to influence decision making regarding matters related to equitation science.
- Work closely with the Research Officer to disseminate research relevant to the equine veterinary community and find potential sources of funding for research.

The VLO must be a senior veterinarian of appropriate standing within the international equine world. It would be expected that this person has exemplary communication and interpersonal skills to facilitate the dissemination of evidence based approaches to horse use and management within the veterinary profession.

For further information about ISES please visit www.equitationsscience.com and to register your interest please send your application and C.V. to the president@equitationsscience.com.

Applications for this important and exciting role close by 31st March, 2010.